Manager's Commentary

The geopolitical risk emanating from Russia-Ukraine conflict continued to affect the market. The wider impact of this conflict can be felt across energy and agricultural commodity prices, ultimately finding its way to the inflation numbers. Economists are busy recalibrating possible trajectories for inflation given the current squeeze on energy prices, particularly oil. The CPI readings are expected to remain high over the next few months. In the absence of the current geopolitical risk, we had expected these readings to have peaked by Q1 this year

The Federal Reserve announced on March 16th that it would raise interest rates for the first time since 2018. Rates were raised 0.25% in response to rising inflation and undoubtedly have further to go with mortgages set to cost significantly more in time. Again, equities have been resilient in the face of central banks tightening monetary policy – which is not unusual during the early stages of an interest rate rising cycle.

Central bankers have other tools at their disposal to reduce excess liquidity in economies, with quantitative tightening, or QT if you prefer, potentially able to play a role alongside higher interest rates. Care should be taken not to raise rates too high too soon and choke off growth aggressively as economies naturally retard, as set out earlier. There is scope for central bank policy error in this regard and we remain alert to early signals.

The spread between 10Y and 2Y treasuries act as a rough measure to gauge market sentiments with regards to economic growth and risk on/off mood. An inversion of this curve generally acts as a signal for a possible slowdown within the next 12/24 months. This yield curve inverted briefly towards the end of the month signaling the shorter end of the yield curve is expecting further rate rises and demand for longer duration securities due to a possible slow down during 2023.

We believe now is time for some sensible housekeeping. There is still scope for equity upside, of that we have little doubt, but the risk reward balance has shifted. We have marginally reduced our US equity exposure and Gold equity exposure on the last day of the month. All portfolios remained inside their allocated risk corridors during the month.
