Manager's Commentary

Geo-political developments remained a major theme in Q4 2018 along with the increase in US interest rates and increasing concerns about the health of the global economy. Major stock indices ended the year in red. UK equities were not immune to the impact of global issues.

Thin trading volumes and Fed induced nervousness led to an increase in volatility over the festive period with investors reducing risk to some extent and taking cover in Treasuries and cash.

US fundamental data for Q4 pointed to a healthy economy, however, forward guidance by major US companies and labour cuts point to headwinds ahead. China's fundamental data for Q4 pointed to a slowing economy and with the US-China Trade war now impacting on both countries, we expect a deal to emerge shortly.

We believe the UK equity market is now relatively undervalued and offering good long-term value and expect UK equities to outperform once Brexit uncertainty is removed.

We have, therefore, increased our UK equity exposure this month as well as marginally raising our weightings in cash and medium-to-long term bonds.
